ON THE BRINK OF WAR.

THE United States senate is not going to rush rashly into this war business, in spite of the jingoism who would like to see the country involved in a struggle necessitating the outlay of hundreds of millions. The house by a vote of 337 to 37 expressed its willingness to shoot up Mexico just for the sake of vindicating the honor of the flag. If the "honor" of the flag is to be vindicated it is certain that the whole country would back the president as a unit in any demonstration that he might feel compelled to order. Nevertheless the fact that the senate hung up the resolution for another twenty-four hours leaves the suspicion that there is something else to be considered than the bald proposition to march into the territory of a neighbor and seize his property without sufficient justification.

Since the country has stood patiently all the contumely, insult and outrages heaped on it for the past year without entering more than a feeble protest, it begins to look as though the detention of a few marines at Tampico was not such a grave offense after all. Especially in view of the fact that an apology was offered within a short time after the demand from Admiral Mayo, it is suggested that continuance is better than valor and that more real headway can be made by going slowly at first.

The action of the senate indicates that body is not convinced of the justice of making war on a weaker nation or has not been converted to the European policy of intimidation and confiscation. To the laity it appears as though the mining, oil and other predatory interests are using Uncle Sam to pull their chestnuts out of the fire and that the United States will have a mass of bills to pay while the trusts reap the profits. If the flag has been insulted, war to vindicate national honor will be a popular movement, but should it be disclosed that the chief executive of the United States has simply been deluded by a lot of unscrupulous wirepullers the administration will have but half-hearted support.

Behind the latest move on Huerta's part probably lies his realization of the hopelessness of his cause. Many months ago he uttered a veiled threat that any pressure brought to bear by the United States to compel him to withdraw from the city of Mexico and surrender the office which he has usurped would enable him to unite all the warring factions of Mexico against the common enemy. This may be what he is now trying to bring about. If Huerta has decided to escape the arbitration of the sword between himself and his antagonists by drawing his country into a foreign war he must take the consequences, even if they involve the giving of assistance to his enemies and their formal recognition by the government of the United States.

Some radical change has evidently taken place in the views of the federal government of which the newspapers and the public have not yet been informed. As far as making a hostile demonstration against a weak position like Tampico is concerned there was no need for rushing a dozen battleships and other vessels of war with a landing force of 10,000 men to the scene. The American vessels on the Mexican coast were sufficiently powerful to handle the situation as far as Tampico is concerned.

G. F. Talbot, chief justice of the State Supreme Court, is satisfied with stationery from the home printers, but Nye county officials are not willing to have anything but costly embossed envelopes and letterheads.

Bryan has been offered the chairmanship of the Carnegie Peace Foundation, which may prove more to his liking, with a salary of $25,000 a year, than in his present job, after having made a mess of the Mexican situation.

While time is money the regional reserve banks will not issue any of that kind.

So far only antepenultimatums have been sent to the City of Mexico.

Huerta has decided that he can not Badger the American navy.

Villa is using the besom of expatriation against the Spaniards.

Uncle Sam refuses even to simulate a simultaneous salute.
